I would like to thank everyone who reviewed manuscripts in preparation for this issue of te Reo. Their work has been prompt and efficient, and has contributed considerably to the shape of the papers contained in this volume. All contributions are blind reviewed by two reviewers, and this places a lot of pressure on the small community of scholars in New Zealand. I am sure I must owe a few favours by now.

This issue does not contain a listing of thesis completions and book publications in New Zealand, which is being moved to a biennial pattern, and so will next appear in volume 53, in 2010.

I have been investigating possible processes for electronic submission and reviewing of te Reo, in the hope of minimising the use of paper resources and of speeding up the submission and review process. It is likely that this will use the new website for the Linguistic Society of New Zealand, at www.nzlingsoc.org. An announcement will be made shortly.
